Self Analysis of Caregiver stress

Prepared by:

Farzana Nizam Mulla
Consultant Neuropsychologist,
Institute of Neurosciences, Apollo Hospitals, Hyderabad.

ALZHEIMER’S AND RELATED DISORDERS SOCIETY OF INDIA
Hyderabad Deccan Chapter

Memory Clinic, Room No-3,
Millenium Block, Ground Floor,
NIMS Panjagutta,
Hyderabad-500 082
Ph-040-6610341

ARDSI Activity Centre
ASHA De-addiction Centre
Plot No: 451, Road No-86
Jubilee Hills, Hyd-500 033
Ph-040-23545560

Web: ardsihyd.org
Email: ardsihyd@gmail.com
Care giving is putting too much stress on you if you have any of the following symptoms:

- Feeling overwhelmed
- Sleeping too much or too little
- Gaining or losing a lot of weight
- Feeling tired most of the time
- Loss of interest in activities you used to enjoy
- Becoming easily irritated or angered
- Feeling constantly worried
- Often feeling sad
- Frequent headaches, bodily pains or other physical problems
- Misuse of alcohol or drugs, including prescription drugs
Emotional and physical strain of caregiving.

It can take many forms. For instance, you may feel:

- Frustrated and angry taking care of someone with dementia who often wanders away or become easily upset (crying easily).

- Guilty because you think that you should be able to provide better care, despite all the other things that you have to do.

- Lonely because all the time you spend caregiving has hurt your social life.

- Exhausted when you go to bed at night.

Although caregiving can be challenging, it is important to note that it can also have its rewards. Some carers do report that:

- They appreciate life more as a result of their caregiving experience.

- Caregiving has made them feel good about themselves.
How can I prevent or relieve stress?

- Humor: can I see the funny side of things and laugh?
- Letting go.
- Being present in the here and now.

*****